CYCLONE DAVIS AND THE COLLAR

Representative "Cyclone" Davis of Texas has denied on the floor of the house that he had promised the farmers of Texas never to wear a collar, although he did admit that what he wears is becoming a national question.

Mr. Davis said he had a weak chest and that he had been advised by a physician to protect his throat and lungs. He added:

"I have endeavored to do this by wearing a muffler. This week I pulled off a silkenette muffler that cost me $1.50 and put on a 15-cent collar and it becomes a national sensation. For the benefit of the very delicate and fastidious sensibilities of the New York gentry and diamond-decked dukes who read the papers, I beg to say that I have little regard for the summery, frills, founces and furbelows that the world calls fashion. I think comfort, decency and health should be the governing factors in the selection of all dress."

The other day Speaker Clark beckoned to Mr. Davis.

"I would like to have you preside over the house for a few minutes," he said.

"I would be deeply honored," said Davis.

"But you must not shout 'Amen' from the chair," warned Mr. Clark.

"Then I can't accept the gavel," said "Cyclone," and he walked back to his seat, and began yelling "Amen" again with redoubled force.

SENATOR WADSWORTH HAZED

Senators have been laughing over a little practical joke played on Senator Wadsworth of New York. Though Mr. Wadsworth has been in the senate only a few weeks, he has established his popularity; but a new senator's popularity only adds to the pleasure his older colleagues take in mildly "hazing" him. The hazing meted out to Mr. Wadsworth was just the reverse of the classic methods of West Point, for, instead of having food stuffed down his throat, he was almost starved.

Whether the vice president was in the plot or not does not appear, but just before luncheon time he beckoned to Mr. Wadsworth, handed him the gavel, and left Mr. Wadsworth to preside. Then Mr. Poindexter of Washington began a speech that lasted two hours and a half. Mrs. Wadsworth was in the gallery waiting for the senator to take her to luncheon, and the senator from New York was eager to go, but no one would take his place. The vice president kept out of sight, and the senators to whom Mr. Wadsworth beckoned frantically only smiled and shook their heads.

Finally when Mr. Poindexter had concluded and the vice president had returned, Mrs. Wadsworth had gone away in despair, and the senator from New York, almost exhausted with hunger, ate by himself in the senate restaurant.

HEADS FORESTRY BODY

Charles Lathrop Pack, financier, worker in many public-spirited movements and one of the fathers of the conservation movement, was unanimously elected president of the American Forestry association at its recent annual convention in Boston.

Mr. Pack makes his home in Lakewood, N. J., and Cleveland, O. As one of the active organizers of the famous conference of governors, held at the White House in 1908, he was instrumental in giving impetus to the cause of the conservation of national resources. He was president of the Fifth National Conservation congress, held in Washington, D. C., in 1913, and his administration of the affairs of the congress brought about notable achievements in the matter of forestry and water power conservation.

Mr. Pack was one of the first forestry experts in America. In 1885 he received from the late Jay Gould what is believed to have been the first large fee ever paid in the country for the services of a forester. He has been a conspicuous success in business and finance. He is vice president of the World Court league and a member of the National Institute of Social Sciences.

PEER, BUT NO ARISTOCRAT

His would be an unimaginative soul that did not find some inspiration and quickening in the career of Lord Shaughnessy, the son of an Irish policeman of Milwaukee, Wis., who has now added to his other honors the rank of peer to the realm.

Shaughnessy himself has strong views on the question of aristocracy. More than once he has expressed his repugnance to an aristocracy of wealth, such as prevails in America, and for an aristocracy of family based on wealth, such as prevails in England.

Lord Shaughnessy began railroad-ing as a lad of sixteen in the office of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. Ten years later he was the company's general storekeeper. When Sir William Van Horne took over the management of the Canadian Pacific in 1881 he took the first train to Milwaukee in order to secure the services of Tom Shaughnessy as his purchasing agent. He found him in a restaurant and fixed the appointment then and there, for Shaughnessy was considered the best purchasing agent on any American railroad. Then it was just one step after another; assistant manager, manager, vice president, general manager, and then president at the age of forty-six years.

Shaughnessy has been described as the ablest man in Canada. He has the warm heart, hot impetuosity and driving power of the typical Irishman. And he is Irish through and through. He named his summer place down by the sea Fort Tipperary long before Tipperary became the marching song of British legions. He is a Roman Catholic and an ardent home ruler.

THE GERMAN MATCH INDUSTRY.

In 1833 Johann Friedrich Kummerow of Wurtemberg invented phosphorus matches. Ten years later the first match factories were established in the Harz mountains in the neighborhood of Brunswick. At first matches cost $3 to $3.75 a thousand. The production reached its highest point at the beginning of the present century. In 1901 the total production of German matches was 205,400,000. After the introduction of the tax of October 1, 1909, the production considerably decreased. In 1910 it only amounted to 59,362,000,000 matches. The introduction of substitutes and electric lighting contributed to the decrease. The manufacture of matches has been affected through the want of the necessary wood, the sap and trembling poplar being used, the importation of which, principally from Russia, has been cut off. These kinds of wood absorb paraffin easily. In their place pine is used, as it was formerly for phosphorus matches.

BURKE'S GOOD RECORD

Democratic Veteran a Hot Favorite for Delegate at Large.

Robert E. Burke, candidate for Delegate at Large, born and has lived all his life in the twenty-first Ward and lives at present at 1432 North La Salle street, within five hundred yards of where he was born. Was Secretary of the Democratic Party of Cook County for about ten years and Secretary of the County Democracy of Cook County for twenty-two years and at present holding that position. He was a member of the State Central Committee for years and always a firm believer in thorough party organization. He organized the Carter H. Harrison Democratic Association in 1892, which was largely instrumental in nominating and electing the lamented Carter H. Harrison, Sr., World's Fair Mayor in 1893. He has organized during the past twenty-five years powerful political forces among the various foreign nationalities, which comprise Chicago's cosmopolitan population.

He supported Cleveland in 1884, Cleveland in 1888, Cleveland in 1892, Bryan in 1896, Bryan in 1900, Parker in 1904, Bryan in 1908, and Wilson in 1912. He has consistently supported all the Democratic Candidates for Mayor of Chicago, for the past quarter of a century including Harrison, Sr., Cregier, Hopkins, Wenter, Harrison, Jr., Dunne and Switzer.

Organized labor has no greater friend than Mr. Burke and among his supporters in the coming battle will be Simon O'Donnell, John Fitzpatrick, Edward M. Nockels, Stephen C. Sumner, Martin McGraw, George F. Crowe, Joseph Morton and many other prominent leaders in labor organizations.

Aside from politics Mr. Burke's particular hobby is baseball and he numbers among his personal friends, Charles A. Comiskey, Joe Tinker, Jimmy Callahan, Frank Chance, and many other leaders. He was manager and captain of one of the best-known amateur teams in Chicago some years ago.

Thousands of Democrats in Chicago owe everything they have received politically to the unwavering loyalty of Mr. Burke, and he in return will receive their loyal support in his candidacy for Delegate at Large at the coming primary election.

Former Judge John E. Owens is strongly backed for one of the Democratic nominations for Judge of the Superior Court.

Wheeler & Co., the popular clothiers at 185 South State street, over Peacock's, are doing an immense business.

ness. Their credit system makes many friends and patrons for them.

Judge D. E. Sullivan has made an honest, dignified and able record on the bench.

Benjamin F. Richardson, the well known lawyer, has met with deserved success and has a host of friends.
